COVER ART: The Atlantian Arms by Master Bran Trefonnen. All interior heraldry and the Atlantian Map centerfold were also created by Master Bran.

All armory blazons are from the online Armorial and Ordinary located at <http://oanda.sca.org> and are as accurate as the information provided. The database is supplied without any warranty, stated or implied. In particular, no claim is made that it is accurate, complete, or suitable for any purpose. Use it at your own risk. In case of disagreement between the database and Laurel's records, Laurel's records should be considered correct. Order creation dates and Baronial elevation dates are from the online Order of Precedence located at <http://op.atlantia.sca.org/> and have been checked against available data. Branch establishment dates are provided from various sources, including past minutes of the Board of Directors. Many branches are older than the est. date listed since baronies, in particular, are dated from their elevation, not necessarily the creation of the branch that preceded the barony.

Field Guide to Atlantian Heraldry

by Bran Trefonnen

In the following pages, you'll find my interpretations of the many pieces of armory encountered in the day-to-day lives of most Atlantian subjects. So often, we see heraldry but don't necessarily understand its significance. Or we see branch arms but don't know just which branch the arms represent. Starting with the Arms of Atlantia itself, I've illustrated, or emblazoned, all of the heraldry registered to Atlantia that one might encounter at an event. I've also included a branch map of Atlantia as the centerfold so you can get a better geographical sense of where some of the branch armory may be encountered. Where possible, I've included origin dates for both Atlantian honors as well as its branches. I hope you find some of the information here useful.
